NUMBER 58.

Tait In Paris.

There was a crowd of about one hundred people gathered at the L. & N. passenger depot Wednesday afternoon to get a glimpse of Secretary Tait as he passed through on the 5:30 train for Lexington. He got off the train and grasped the hand of nearly every one in the crowd, black and white alike, and from all appearances seemed to be a jolly and good mixer.

The train was boarded at Paris by Congressman D. C. Edwards, of the Eleventh District.

When the train arrived at Muir station Secretary Tait and his second secretary, Mr. Wendell Misceler, were met by Mr. C. H. Berryman and four other gentlemen who composed a party invited to Elmendorf by Mr. Berryman to dine with the Secretary that evening. The party was composed of the host, Mr. C. H. Berryman, Judge A. M. J. Cochran, of Maysville; Mr. Samuel J. Roberts, Mr. Thomas L. Walker and Mr. Desha Breckinridge. The evening was a social one and nothing in the way of political discussion transpired.

Goes To Japan.

The Rev. T. W. B. Demaree, a prominent Methodist minister, lately of Winchester, has left for Japan, where he will have charge of a large district as Presiding Elder. He has spent seventeen years in the foreign missionary field, and after a vacation of eighteen months in this country, has decided to return. His family will remain for the present at Cadiz.

Heavy Cattle Shipment

Jonas and Sim Wiel Wednesday bought and shipped 264 export cattle for the Liverpool, England, market, from Richmond. They averaged 1,480 pounds per head and brought $5.50 per hundred pounds.

Dropped Dead.

Thomas F. Shay, of the law firm of Shay, Cagan & Williams, of Cincinnati, famous as criminal lawyers in the Middle West, dropped dead Monday night shortly after 9 o'clock at Fourth and Plum streets in that city.

Suit Abandoned.

The suit of the "next friends" of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy against prominent members of the Christian Science faith was suddenly abandoned Wednesday at Concord, N. H., and a motion for dismissal of the suit was entered by William E. Chandler, counsel for the "next friends." Gen. Streeter, for the defense, protested, demanding a decision as to Mrs. Eddy's competency to manage her own affairs. It is believed that Judge Chamberlain will dismiss the suit.

Slight Injury Fatal.

Clarence Vanarsdall, whose hand was caught in the rollers of a feed mill and mashed several days ago, at Harrodsburg, is dead. Blood-poisoning set in, resulting in lockjaw. The injured member was amputated, but it was too late. The secret marriage of Mr. Vanarsdall to Miss Bertha Towser, of Mercer county, last February, was revealed by his being injured. His wife was at Danville, Ill., at the time he was hurt, where she held a position as governess in a wealthy family, and on being notified of her husband's injury, came to Harrodsburg and was with him when he died.

A Nerry Aeronaut.

H. H. McGill, editor of the Osborn (Ohio) Local, who has turned aeronaut, proved himself a hero at Springfield, O., Wednesday, at the county fair, where he is making daily ascensions in his balloon. He saved the life of John Clark, a ten-year-old boy, a most thrilling feat.

Just as McGill's balloon was cut loose young Clark got caught in the ropes and went skyward. A cry of horror burst from the crowd. McGill heard the screams of the people and, glancing down, saw the lad tangled in the ropes. The balloon was 50 feet in the air at the time.

McGill has but one arm. Nerry and cool, he reached down from his trapeze and with his one hand gathered up the ropes of the parachute. It took but a moment to form a pouch of the parachute just below the boy.

"Slide down into the parachute," commanded the aeronaut, and the boy tremblingly obeyed. The crowd watched the maneuver breathlessly and cheered as the boy slid into his nest, while the balloon went soaring upward hundreds of feet.

The additional weight of the boy prevented the balloon from going as high as it might otherwise have done. Soon the balloon began to fall and it slowly descended a little west of the fair grounds. McGill cut loose the parachute as he neared the earth, to prevent the bag falling on them, and the big and little aeronaut came gently down in the narrow space between a fence and a house, but unhurt.

Clark had been crying up in the air, and he was a badly frightened little boy when he reached the earth again, but mightily glad to get there. "You're all right, ain't you, boy?" exclaimed McGill, as the two righted themselves. "I lost my hat," truthfully said John. Somebody came along who knew the boy, and who was afraid that his mother, Mrs. Margaret Clark, might hear of the ascension without knowing of its fortunate ending, and John was hustled off home to assure her himself of his personal safety.

Editor McGill was cheered to the echo. He made his first ascension on July 4 at Osborn. He arranged a big celebration for the town. One of the features was a balloon ascension. The aeronaut failed to appear, and McGill, rather than disappoint the crowd, went up in the balloon. His trip was most successful, and he is now giving public exhibitions of his skill.

Judge Tarvin Dead.

Judge James P. Tarvin, of Covington, Ky., died suddenly at the Hollenden Hotel, at Cleveland, O., Tuesday. He had been suffering from asthma for years. He was seated with his wife and Mrs. E. F. Shinkle at the hotel in the morning, when he became ill. Dr. Thomas A. Burke, County Coroner, was called, but when he arrived the Judge was dead.

Judge Tarvin was stopping in Cleveland on his way to a health resort in the North, with his wife and Mrs. Shinkle, of Cincinnati. He was forty-seven years old, and a prominent jurist and politician.

Colored Institute.

The Institute for colored teachers will convene in this city Monday and will continue for five days, being conducted by Prof. Smith, Principal of the colored schools of Versailles. The Institute will be held in the colored school building.

Sympathy With Strikers.

The irrepressible conflict between capital and labor goes on continually. There is now a strike among the telegraph operators and the business of the country is greatly interrupted. Big corporations have become so grinding in their methods that public sympathy usually goes out to the strikers.

"Parsifal."

Everyone who saw John Lane Conners as "Parsifal," with Martin and Embury's company last season, will be pleased to know that he has been retained for the titular role this year. His melodious reading and splendid stage presence have made him a big favorite.

3,000 Attend Baptizing.

Three thousand persons gathered at Bridgeville, Robinson county, to witness the baptizing of sixty-four young men and women, who had united with the Thompson Christian church in a protracted meeting which had been in progress for the last two weeks. The meeting was conducted by Elder M. Pfanzagl, of Mt. Olivet. It was the largest number ever known to have been baptized at one time in that county.

Threatened to Jail Preacher.

Mayor Charles M. Meacham, of Hopkinsville, threatened to put the Rev. B. F. Hyde, a Baptist minister, in jail if he did not cease making inflammatory remarks at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Christian County Tobacco Growers' Protective Association. Mr. Hyde had been speaking of the attitude of the newspapers in regard to the depredations of the "night riders." The meeting adopted resolutions denouncing lawlessness and calling on Gov. Beckham to join Gov. Patterson of Tennessee in a determined effort to put an end to the outrages against non-association farmers.

The thread trust has raised prices from seventy five to one hundred per cent. Now wouldn't that fray your buttonholes?

.....PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.....The Democratic Campaign.

The Democratic State Campaign is to be opened within the next few days and conducted in most vigorous fashion to the day of the election in November. Beginning the campaign together at Lexington, Judge S. W. Hager and Governor Beckham are to then take different routes, the head of the ticket going directly into the Republican strongholds of eastern Kentucky and into his own home country, the Big Sandy Valley, and the Democratic nominee for United States Senator going to Western Kentucky, where, at Paducah, he will start a campaign to arouse the loyal Democrats of that great section of the State. Col. John K. Hendrick, nominee for Attorney General and a fine campaigner, is to accompany Judge Hager on the trip through the eastern section of the State. Every Democratic candidate will go immediately upon the stump, and Democratic speakers in every section have tendered their services to the State Committee headed by Judge Henry B. Hines. The general campaigning is to begin on September 2nd, next, when a Democratic orator will be upon the stump at every county seat at which a term of either County or Circuit Court is being held.

The gathering of Democratic leaders at Frankfort last week was a most auspicious one, and bodes well for the campaign. The party candidates evinced a determination to get into action as quickly as possible, allowing but little time between the Republican opening and that upon the part of the Democrats. Governor Beckham sounded the keynote of the campaign in a talk to the other candidates when he declared that the dividing issue between the two parties would be as to their records in the management of the public affairs of Kentucky. Reviewing the military reign of Bradley for four years, and the brief and bloody reign of the now fugitive Taylor, he declared that the every act of the Republican officials should be laid bare before the people by Democratic speakers, and that the party speakers would urge a most minute inspection of the record made by the Democratic party during the seven and one-half years it has been managing State affairs, and since Taylor fled fugitive from the State.

"I would rather turn the office of Governor over to Judge Hager in December next and lose a seat in the United States Senate than to go to that position seeing the Republicans restored to power in my State," said the Governor in the course of his speech to the candidates. "I want this Democratic ticket that has been nominated to win by a good majority, and I feel that it will do so. No Democrat can afford to sulk at this time, and I do not believe that any of them will do so. We candidates cannot rely altogether upon ourselves in this contest. We must depend in great measure upon our party's leaders in the several districts and upon the county press of the State, which is already rendering splendid service."

Speaking of the issue between the parties the Governor said: "On no other question is the fundamental difference between the Republican party and the Democratic party shown more plainly than in the way each party regards and uses the military power of the State. Nowhere has that difference between the two parties been more clearly shown and exemplified than it has been in Kentucky since the winter of 1895-96, when the Republican party, for the first time in the history of the State, came into power and control of the affairs of the Commonwealth. A careful review of the records shows conclusively that the Republican party in Kentucky, as it has ever been in the South, is a party of force and fraud, and never hesitates, when it so desires, to place military power above the civil. We need not go back into the dark days of reconstruction, when the domination of that radical party brooded like a nightmare over our prostrate Southern sisters, for we have had here in Kentucky, within the memory of living voters, an actual demonstration of what it would do when placed in power in this State. Governor Bradley had been in power only three months when, true to the instincts of radical haste and Southern Republicanism, he called into active service the militia and placed them in control of the General Assembly of the State. Such a thing had never before happened in the history of the State. A more inexcusable partisan blunder was never made by an executive; a more brazen violation of the Constitution never committed. All through his administration, without warrant of law, and without a particle of necessity, this same Republican Governor used and abused the power of the militia. No greater crime against free institutions was ever before committed in this State than done by Governor Bradley in his disastrous attempt to terrorize and control the voters of the great city of Louisville in the election of 1899. And yet this is Republicanism in Kentucky. Then, after the election, came the unspeakable Taylor and his associates in power, and the blood-stained record left behind them during the few months of criminal control is so fresh in the minds of Kentuckians that it is hardly necessary here to review it. He used that same military power not only to protect those suspected of having murdered William Goebel, but to drive from the Capitol the Senate and House of Representatives of the State, and had them chased through the streets of Frankfort by this same lawless soldiery at the point of the bayonets. Even the Appellate Court, the State's highest tribunal, was compelled to make escape from this same crowd of freebooters who were temporarily in charge of the government. And this, too, is Kentucky Republicanism. What right have we to expect anything any better of Mr. Willson than we could from Mr. Bradley or Mr. Taylor? Is he better man than his terror party? The people of the State cannot and will not be fooled again by this same old leopard whose spots have never changed."

"Importance of Democratic Victory."

In no recent publication is better advice given to Democrats throughout Kentucky as to the course that they should pursue this year than in an editorial utterance of the Lexington Gazette, a Democratic newspaper of strong convictions. Under the heading "Importance of Democratic Victory," that newspaper has the following which should be read by every voter of the party:

"Democrats all over the country are hopeful of victory in the Presidential election of next year. The people are turning to Democratic principles as the only solution of the problems that confront the country, as offering the only remedies for the abuses and evils of our political and economic affairs."

"In this hour of the Democratic hope will Kentucky falter? Will the State stand by the Democratic colors?"

"There can be no mistaking the meaning of a decisive Republican victory in Kentucky this year. If the Republicans elect their State ticket, a State Legislature, a United States Senator to succeed Senator McCreary, and a municipal ticket in Louisville they will elect the electoral ticket next year. Such a result would give the Republicans an opportunity for permanently entrenching themselves in power that they have never enjoyed."

"With Kentucky becoming a Republican State there would be but little chance of a Democratic victory in the Presidential contest of next year. Democrats cannot afford to lose any ground they occupy if the party is to win next year, it would not only maintain its length, but make gains this year. There is nothing in the situation in Kentucky to justify the sacrifice of the party in the nation."

"Every State's first duty is to itself and if Kentucky were in any great peril, if Democratic victory this year involved any serious menace to the State's welfare, no patriotic man would vote his party ticket at the expense of his own state for the sake of a Democratic national victory next year; but no such condition exists. The welfare of Kentucky is to be best served by the election of the Democratic ticket."

"No loyal Democrat will permit factional difficulties to drive him to the support of the Republican party. A loyal Democrat, a man who desires the ultimate triumph of Democratic principles, may vote for his party this year even if he does not approve of all of its candidates and though it may not be entirely satisfied with all it has done in State affairs.

"With the result in Kentucky sure to be an important factor in next year's contest. Democrats should bury all differences and put the welfare of the party and the country above mere personal interest. If we are to elect a President next year, we will need Kentucky's vote, and to insure this vote, we must have a Democratic victory this year. A Democratic President will need the votes of Democratic Senators from Kentucky and at this crisis in public affairs, we cannot afford to do anything that would expose the party and the State to the danger of a Republican Senator at Washington."

Man's Walk Shows Age.

"You can tell a man's age by his hands," said one of the girls. "They get knotty and veined and terrible. They get old sooner than his face."

"You can tell it most of all, I think," said the woman, "by his walk. I know a man who has been one of the brightest minds of his time who is still the best company I know, but the other day when I saw him come toward me at his home along the hall it made me awfully sad to see the heavy, old, old way in which he walked."—New York Press.

CONSUMPTION'S WARNING

Inside facts soon become evident in outside symptoms.—Dr. G. G. GREEN.

"The aid of scientific inventions is not needed to determine whether your lungs are affected. The first symptoms can be readily noted by anyone of average intelligence."

"There is no disease known that gives so many plain warnings of its approach as consumption, and no serious disease that can be so quickly reached and checked, if the medicine used is Dr. Boschee's German Syrup, which is made to cure consumption."

"It is in the early stages that German Syrup should be taken, when warnings are given in the cough that won't quit, the congestion of the bronchial tubes and the gradual weakening of the lungs, accompanied by frequent expectoration. But no matter how deep-seated your cough, even if dread consumption has already attacked your lungs, German Syrup will surely effect a cure—as it has done before in thousands of apparently hopeless cases of lung trouble. Harriet Winthrop belonged to the class of girls who bow to physical strength in the opposite sex. Frail, almost flowerlike in her beauty, the sort of girl who had been protected and served all her life, she yet decorated her tiny morning room with etchings and small statuettes of classic heroes famed for their physical prowess, and she could sit through a veritable blizzard to watch a football match and shout herself hoarse for Ted's college team.

Ted was her brother, and he said that somewhere in Harriet's makeup was a strain from the blood of an ancestral belle who had cheered on her hero in the old tournament days, for the Winthrops could trace their lineage to the tournament days and further, and even though Mr. Winthrop had lost a large slice of the old family fortune through ill advised investments, they maintained their social standing, lived in a large house, and dressed in the latest fashions, and held fast to every tradition, including the firm belief that no lady rides in a street car or other public conveyance. She may walk abroad for exercise only, but when riding or shopping the plain, old-fashioned brougham of the departed Winthrop ladies was brought into service.

That was why when many other girls with more money to spend on shopping tripped merrily up and down the great retail thoroughfare Harriet Winthrop clasped in the Winthrop brougham, caught in a blockade of snarling motormen, sharp faced chauffeurs and obstinate cabbies. The brougham swung to one side, the wheels grinding the curb, and Harriet leaned forward to see how close they were to the shop wherein could be found a certain piece of silvery blue gauze marked down to post holiday prices. Then, with a gasp and a shudder, she leaned back in the carriage and closed her eyes. She had forgotten the silvery gauze, the shop, the jam of vehicles—everything save the tall, square shouldered figure of a man, whose entire attention seemed to be centered on the flat of panes he was turning in the window of a white front restaurant.

The brougham moved forward a few inches, then several feet. Very soon it would be out of range, so Harriet took one more glimpse at the window to make sure that her eyes had not deceived her. No, it was he, and this time he was actually handing the white aproned waitress a plate piled high with golden brown cakes.

What was Jerry Douglas doing in that window, and how could he bestow upon the white aproned girl precisely the same frank, cordial smile with which he had greeted Harriet at that last dance, after Teddy's taunt had won through Douglas' clever coaching? She bought half a yard more gauze than she needed and went home firmly convinced that Jerry Douglas had been cooking cakes to pay a wager. That night she went to a dance where many mutual friends gathered, but no one seemed to have heard of the escapade, and she was too proud to make inquiries. The next day she went back to the shop so close to the restaurant. A bit of pale blue velvet ribbon would set off that silver gauze, but she decided that, after all, she did not care whether the silver gauze was developed into a creation or not. Nothing mattered save that her idol had crumbled at her very feet or, more properly speaking, within a few feet of the wheels of her brougham, for there again was Jerry Douglas, turning what she thought must be very fat and indigestible fried biscuits.

So it was not an election wager or anything of that sort. Ah, she knew! He had gone in for sociology. He was studying the condition of the working classes. Next thing he would be living in one of those dreadful settlement houses, holding club meetings for ragamuffins and poor factory girls and writing silly things for magazines—this man whom she had watched with baited breath on the football field, whom she had pictured as sallying forth to pit his magnificent strength, physical and mental, against the magnates of the commercial and financial world.

Cooking cakes in a restaurant window!

Harriet Winthrop walked with firm, deliberate step to her desk and took down from the wall above it a picture showing a group of lusty young men in football attire and also a certain individual picture of a young man with a finely formed head and broad, square shoulders. She thrust the two behind some boxes on the top shelf of her closet and then sat down for a good cry.

Of course she might have found out what it all meant if Teddy had been home, but Teddy, after leaving college, had gone to Paris to follow up his studies in naval architecture. Anyway it did not matter. Of course it had been only a girlish fancy, and then Jerry Douglas had acted rather strangely since he went back to his Virginia home—a few casual notes, no references to his future career, in which she had betrayed an interest, which she now felt was presumption and unmanly, and so she cried some more.

And just after she had worked herself into a fine nervous state, from which she would issue forth pallid and voracious, a messenger brought her a most amazing note. It was from Jerry Douglas, and it calmly invited Miss Winthrop to attend a little supper he was giving at the Empire restaurant in honor of his promotion. It would be served on the upper floor of the restaurant at Thursday midnight, after the rush was over, and would she please come, because Mrs. Ned Landers had agreed to act as chaperon and every one knew that Mrs. Ned was a host in herself.

There was a perfectly legitimate avenue of inquiry which even the Winthrop pride might not hesitate to follow, so she latched her eyes, summoned the Winthrop brougham and drove to Mrs. Ned Landers' smart studio apartment. Of course she could not accept the invitation, and she would not decline without making inquiries.

Mrs. Landers, shrewdly reading from the white, tired face that something had gone amiss, made tea directly, and Harriet slipped it appreciatively.

"You know, mother is a bit old-fashioned."

"She even disapproved of studio flats instead of houses?" inquired Mrs. Landers, with dancing eyes.

"She thinks you are the most wonderful manager in the world, but a restaurant supper—I mean that particular sort of restaurant!"

"I understand, and I am just biding my time. I've been waiting to tell every one for weeks, but Jerry Douglas made me cross my heart and swear no. My dear, he is a hero, the sort you don't often find in this age of spoiled millionaire sons and traveling parasites. When he finished his college course and started to read law with an old friend of his father's down in Virginia he made what was to him an awful discovery. His inheritance had paid only his bare expenses at college. All the little pleasures, necessities, the social end of the game, his mother had made by her own handiwork. She had been doing exquisite embroidery for a woman's exchange and in New York department store to keep him at college as his father and grandfather had been kept before him.

"His first feeling, being a Virginia man of chivalric pride, was deep humiliation. I am afraid he was a bit hard on the little mother for daring to do such a thing. Then he turned his back on the law and came north, going straight to the father of a younger son he had known at college, the sort who roll in wealth made in a single generation. The boy's father has all sorts of commercial interests, including the Empire chain of quick lunch counters, and he promptly offered Jerry the chance to act as cashier in one of these dreadful lunch rooms."

Harriet was leaning forward, drinking in every word, oblivious to the fact that Mrs. Ned was studying her face with narrowly amusement.

"Well, this particular lunch room was in a badly organized state, and Jerry not only made changes, but he fired the cook, who had been making trouble, and cooked himself until he could get a decent team. He stopped queuing among the waitresses—and now he is going to Mexico for the man who was just trying him out in a lunch room, and, what is more, he is going on a most ticklish and important mission."

Harriet leaned back with a sigh that might have meant reaction or something deeper.

"And so he has asked just six of us to have that little supper, for which he agrees to cook all sorts of things, from pancakes to something he calls butter cakes. Anyway, it can't be worse for our direction than some of the New York messes our friend makes in clubbing it up. Will you go?"

"If you won't think me abrupt, I'm going home this minute to telephone my acceptance."

Wise Mrs. Ned did not suggest that in her hallway was a telephone instrument, which Harriet had oftentimes used, and the girl went her way. Later as she hung up the telephone receiver in the Winthrop library her eyes seemed to shine like diamonds, and a soft flush mounted to her pale gold hair. And from the library she went straight to her own room, climbed up to a clothespress shelf and lugged forth two photographs. Then, with her chin resting in the palms of her hands, she sat down, studying them with eyes that still shone with the light that once must have brightened the face of the ancestral belle at the tournament.

Bathing in the Ganges.

At Benares before sunrise we went down the river where our host waited, says a writer in the March Travel Magazine, and sat comfortably on the little cabin roof, kodaks in hand, and as the sun rose higher snarled groups of people so absorbed in their prayers that they hardly noticed us. At the more popular places were a mass of young and old who stood for a moment in the shallow water and then ducked under, emptying little trays of flowers or garlands as they did so till the surface of the water was covered thick. As new crowds constantly pressed forward any one who stayed under water more than a second was in danger of having another worshiper on his back. It was a great festival, and the estimated number of bathers was in the millions.

The Mystery Solved.

"Why did lovey mawwy dovey, huh?" cooed the foolish young married thing as it twined its arms about the neck of its husband.

"Well, you see, we'd been going together quite awhile, Mabel, and you had begun to act this way. So I decided it was the only way I could get rid of you without a breach of promise suit."

And immediately he was rid of her for at least a day or two.—Judge.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Never before in the history of the United States has there been such activity, both by the federal government and the individual states, in the development of waterways. The country is entering on an era of canals never equalled in the western hemisphere. The activity results from two causes, the effects of which have been felt equally in California and Massachusetts as in Minnesota and Texas.

The first cause was found in the gross favoritism shown powerful shippers by the railroads. Rebates and special consideration in the matter of furnishing cars enabled the big corporation to flourish at the expense of the small shipper. The people finally arose, and the result has been a deluge of federal and state laws which conflict and cloud the situation, working hardships alike to the railroads and their patrons.

The second cause culminated in the freight congestion of last winter and spring. Whole communities in the Northwest perishing because the railroads could not furnish cars in which to haul coal to them, and farmers with their granaries bursting with wheat unable to purchase even the necessities of life because of the lack of cars in which to get their grain to market, aroused the country to the fact that the railroads had not kept pace with industry. Commerce had outstripped them and continued prosperity was jeopardized.

Then it was that the people awoke to the campaign being waged by the National Rivers and Harbors Congress. This organization had foreseen these conditions. It had been declaring for five years that not only would develop waterways naturally and logically settle the rate question, but that the railroads were rapidly reaching the stage when they would be absolutely unable to handle the freight of the country. The result was that the nation swung with enthusiastic energy into the work of rehabilitating its rivers and of building canals.

Surveys have just been completed for the canal from Lake Erie to the Ohio River. When the waterway is completed it will be possible for the Lake vessels to carry ore direct from Lake Superior to the great furnaces in the Pittsburgh district and to transport coal from the Western Pennsylvania mines to upper lake ports.

Florida has let the contract for a canal from Jacksonville to Key West, a distance of 150 miles; it is to be finished in five years and is to cost $2,600,000. New York has approved a bond issue of $100,000,000 for the Erie Canal; the State of Washington is considering the appropriation of $5,000,000 for the construction of a ship canal 32 feet deep to connect the waters of Puget Sound and Lake Washington, and Massachusetts is about to have a ship canal cut across Cape Cod, which, when completed, will permit vessels plying between Boston and New York to take the "inside route" all the way.

There are scores of other projects either under way or being carefully considered. There is the deep waterway from the Lakes to the Gulf; the Hennepin canal in Illinois; the canal being constructed in Louisiana which will open the rich lumber district, and the movement afoot to construct a greater and more comprehensive canal at Sault Ste. Marie because of the enormous increase in lake tonnage. The National Rivers and Harbors Congress hopes to impress upon the national Congress the necessity for appropriating $50,000,000 a year to continue the work on government canals. Captain J. F. Elison of Cincinnati, its secretary, is urging shippers and communities to become members so that the prestige of the organization may be increased and its power for effective work be made more potent.

HIDDEN DANGERS.

Nature Gives Timely Warnings That No Paris Citizen Can Afford to Ignore.

DANGER SIGNAL NO. 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They warn you when the kidneys are sick. Well kidneys excrete a clear, amber fluid. Sick kidneys send out a thin, pale and foamy, or a thick red, iridescent urine, full of sediment and irregular of passage.

DANGER SIGNAL NO. 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the approach of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Here's Paris proof:

William Hukill, Jr., tailor, living on Main street, Paris, Ky., says: "I am glad of this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of Doan's Kidney Pills. For a long time, I suffered greatly from kidney trouble and had doctored for it without getting any relief. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I went to J. A. Wilson's drug store and got a box. My condition so wonderfully improved since I began using them, I am very grateful for what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me and advise all sufferers from kidney trouble to try them as I know they will find relief."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

A prominent manufacturer, Wm. A. Feltwell, of Luncama, N. C., relates a most remarkable experience. He says: "After taking less than three bottles of Electric Bitters, I feel like one rising from the grave. My trouble is Bright's disease in the diabetic stage. I fully believe Electric Bitters will cure me permanently, for it has already stopped the liver and bladder complications which have troubled me for years." Guaranteed at Oberdier's, the druggist, Price only 50 cents.

Largest Mule in World.

The largest mule in the world was sold last week at the National Stock Yards in East St. Louis, Ill., for $400 by the Joseph Maxwell Mule Company to a firm at Pittsburg. The animal is a native of Culver, Mo., weighs 1,960 pounds, and stands more than eight feet high with his head up. There is not a blemish on him, and besides being the largest, is said by experts to be the most perfect formed large mule in the world.

Startling Statistics From Washington.

Statistics made public by John G. Capers, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, will doubtless startle persons and organizations whose aim is to wipe out the use of alcoholic liquor, expect for medicinal purposes, exterminate the cigarette and put an end to the snuff habit in this county.

The figures are those showing the extent of the various lines of industry over which the Revenue Bureau exercises supervision, and from which the Federal Government derives nearly one-half of its income. They cover the fiscal year which ended June 30 last, and in many respects are quite astonishing.

One is impressed, first of all, by the increase in the consumption of spirituous and malt beverages, and this is because of the numerous laws restricting the area in which liquor may be sold or manufactured.

Perhaps it should be explained now that all these figures which follow represent withdrawals for consumption, in other words, the actual consumption upon which the Government levied taxes.

During the fiscal year 1907 there was used 134,142,074 gallons of spirits distilled from grains, an increase over 1906 of 11,409,252. This tremendous quantity of whisky, etc., produced $147,556,281 of revenue for Uncle Sam, an increase of $12,550,177 during the twelve-month period.

Cordials and liquors are also growing in popularity, the production increasing from 1,781,643 gallons to 1,993,688 gallons, and the revenue thereon from $1,959,807 to $2,193,057. These seductive after-dinner drinks were distilled from such fruits as oranges, apricots, berries and the like.

The brewers of the United States also showed unmistakable signs of prosperity during the year in question. Their production increased from 54,641,637 barrels to 58,546,111 barrels, or about 7 per cent. increase for the distilleries.

The beer, ale, malt extracts, etc., with which the people quench their thirst or induce sleepiness, brought $58,546,110 into the United States Treasury, an increase of $3,894,474 over 1906.

In addition to this the Government collected $1,021,706 in special taxes from brewers and retail and wholesale dealers in fermented goods, while the special taxes from dealers in spirits reached approximately $6,000,000.

Shocking as these figures may be, in view of the activities of the temperance crusaders, those showing the extent of the use of tobacco in every form are equally amazing.

The cigarette statistics are particularly impressive, and these embrace only the manufactured kind, not those made by hand by the hundreds of thousands of smokers throughout the country.

The cigarettes consumed during the year reached the prodigious total of 5,167,021,357, an increase of 1,372,261,454 since 1906. The taxes paid on this account reached $5,163,232, an increase of $1,404,600.

Sumptuary laws against cigarette smoking, such as are in operation in Indiana, seem not to check the habit. The use of cigars continues to be universal, although the relative increase cannot be compared with the growth of the cigarette business.

In 1907 there went up in smoke no less than 8,642,278,219 cigars, as against 7,870,672,548 in 1906. The taxes resulting from this heavy cloud exceeded $23,000,000, nearly $2,000,000 more than last year.

The American people also chewed and smoked 369,186,303 pounds of plug and loose tobacco, much of it grown in Kentucky; an increase of 14,270,804 pounds in a year.

This kind of weed produced $22,151,178 of revenue for the Federal Government. And, besides the smoking and chewing, the people used up 23,401,196 pounds of snuff, an increase of 693,658 pounds, which provided $1,404,071 of taxes.

It is a mystery to the internal revenue officials where all this snuff goes.

Although oleomargarine is taxed, its manufacture is increasing, indicating that the people who use it must like it.

The consumption of oleo in 1907 was 63,986,850 pounds, an increase of 15,842,191 pounds since 1906, when the sales of renovated butter jumped from 54,016,228 pounds to 63,751,840 pounds.

During the fiscal year the aggregate revenue collections reached $269,664,022, an increase of $20,651,284 over 1906. Of this great sum Kentucky produced $28,444,438, or nearly 10 per cent. The various districts contributed as follows: Second, E. T. Franks, collector, $2,569,921; Fifth, J. A. Craft, $15,654,191; Sixth, G. W. Sieberth, $3,760,657; Seventh, S. J. Roberts, $3,599,779; Eighth, J. S. Cooper, $2,859,888.

A Mule Detective.

The Cynthia Democrat says that a farmer of that county is the owner of a mule that is a born detective. The farmer owned a mare to which the mule was very much attached. One night last week the mare was stolen. The next morning when the mule was let out of the stable, it jumped the fence and struck out on the track of the mare. The farmer followed the mule, caught up with the thief and recovered his stock. The negro who stole the animal is now in jail. He had recently been released from the pen.

Converted Into Skating Rink.

The old livery and sale stable of Garrett D. Wilson, adjoining the Phoenix Hotel, at Lexington, and from which he will soon move to his new quarters across Main street, will be converted by the Phoenix Hotel Company, its purchaser, into a mammoth skating rink which will be opened about October 1. The old stable was bought by the hotel company for the alleged purpose of constructing an addition to the hotel upon its site, but it is now announced that pending the perfection of plans for the new building a skating rink will be established.

The Intruders

BY TROY ALLISON.

Copyright, 1907, by Homer Sprague.

The janitor's wife allowed herself to hesitate and was lost. "There's an apartment you might use for awhile, Miss Marjorie; it wouldn't cost anything, and your little mite of money would last longer."

Marjorie Kershaw's young face brightened. "Martha, you always were a dear, just like you used to be when you and Bob lived on the farm next to our place."

Martha Jordan nodded her head. "I never thought I'd live to see you with your living in the city, Miss Marjorie," she said dolefully.

The girl's face clouded. "Poor old father! He never knew how to manage things. I believe it was the thought of leaving me unprotected for that hastened his death."

Mrs. Jordan took a letterkey from behind the lock. "Dearie, you might as well use the flat—it won't do any harm, and it will make your money hold out longer. Dr. Ingram won't know the difference."

The girl recoiled in the luxury of the apartment. Accustomed to the plainness of a rambling old country house, the Turkish rugs and the artistic furnishings seemed the height of magnificence. She succeeded in securing a position to teach primary music in a private school, after much worry and many letters written by the recter of her home church. She was to board and room at the school when the term commenced, and she thought regretfully of giving up her present artistic quarters.

Mrs. Jordan received one afternoon a letter telling her when to have the rooms ready—and Marjorie Kershaw sprinkled the doctor's plants that night.

She determined to make some payment for her free lodging. So she took from the top of the bookcase the old silver tray with its tea service. She would polish the doctor's silver and leave his apartments in good condition. She probably spent too much energy on the first piece, for yawning in the corner twilight, she leaned back on the pillows of the couch, the silver spread around on the floor, and fell fast asleep.

If old Mrs. Van Lear had not chosen to get sick and to have refused to allow any one except her put physician to look after her, John Ingram would have conformed to Mrs. Jordan's plan, and never have known anything about it. As it was, he let himself into his apartment that night about 9.

Reaching for the electric light, he stumbled over his silver teapot, and the girl on the couch sat up suddenly, her sleepy eyes blinking from the light. She gave one gasp, then straightened herself on the couch, her feet braced firmly on the floor.

"Miss Kershaw, I think Dr. Ingram can soon have that foot feeling more comfortable," she said as the doctor followed her into the room.

"I don't seem able to analyze my feelings," the doctor said doubtfully. "To think of a man breaking into a house and stealing—teapots," she said accusingly.

"I seem to have only one," he hazarded excitedly. "It's just as bad as a dozen—it's stealing," her young voice full of righteous indignation.

The doctor gripped the teapot and stared wonderingly at her tumbled hair and flushed face. "It doesn't seem quite as bad to steal just one; you seem a little hard on a man."

"I don't just know what to do with you," he said. "You see, I never caught a burglar before and don't know what to do."

"Would you mind my sitting down while you think it over? Of course I don't expect you to have much sympathy for me—you have never had any temptation to take things that didn't belong to you."

Her face turned red as she remembered the money she had saved by using some one's apartment without permission.

"—but tonight I was tired and hungry."

"I might give you something to eat," she said hesitatingly. "But I'm afraid to take my finger off this bell."

"Let me fix something to eat," he suggested, with alacrity. "You sit still and watch me and ring the bell if I begin to do anything suspicious."

He went to a cabinet and found some tea, then started the alcohol lamp. "There are some olives and sardines and a box of crackers in the chafing dish cabinet," he said while he put the kettle to boil.

"You must have ransacked the whole apartment before I awoke," she said indignantly.

"Well—er—I do seem to remember where to find things—that's my profession, you know."

"Have you put any of the doctor's things in that grip?" She pointed to the satchel he had left on the door.

The doctor scorned to tell a lie, even when he was cornered. "Only a few of his collars and cuffs," extenuatingly. "You see, I—rather needed some clean things."

"I should think you did." Her glance took in the coal dust sprinkled over his face, the tweed cap set rakishly on his head and the loose Norfolk jacket he had worn to travel in. "Even if you are poor, you might keep your face clean. I wouldn't have blamed you much if you had taken a cake of the doctor's soap—he uses awfully nice soap," reminiscently.

"Would you—er—take a cup of tea, or are you above eating with a burglar?"

Her young eyes were hungry—it had been hours since Mrs. Jordan's early dinner. She hesitated, then held out her hand.

"I'll take the tea," she said finally, "and I'm going to tell you why I'm not going to turn you over to the police."

The doctor allowed just the proper amount of surprise joy to beam in his face. "You are going to let me go?" he gasped.

She nodded her head affirmatively. "Yes—because I'm a thief, too," she said almost in a whisper.

It was a real emotion that appeared on the doctor's face then. "What the devil—what do you mean?" he gasped.

"Oh—I didn't take teapots—I took—everything," miserably.

He forked a sardine out of the box and settled himself comfortably. "Suppose you tell me about it. Maybe we could help each other out of a hole." His voice was full of kindness.

"I took the whole flat," she said forlornly, and told him how she had yielded to the temptation to save her little bit of money.

"Little woman, don't you mind. I don't believe that chump of a doctor would mind a bit if he knew. If he did, he wouldn't be much of a man in my opinion. You needn't even think of it, and you can stay here a week longer and be safely cleared out before he gets back to—the flat," he finished lamely.

"Do you think I might?" she asked eagerly.

"I know you may," with a convulsive air, "and you haven't done anything wrong; you've even done the man a good turn. Haven't you kept me from stealing his silver? And you have talked to me like I was a human being. I promise you I'll never attempt to steal—another teapot as long as I live."

"If you would stop stealing and fix yourself respectably, you would look really nice—and could get a job," she encouraged. "You don't look like a common burglar."

He took the satchel from the floor, trying to hide the fact that he was checking over the idea of not looking hopelessly degraded.

"Whenever I get respectable I shall want to thank you for what you have done for me. Won't you tell me your name?" he asked as he stood in the doorway.

"Marjorie Kershaw, and I will be glad to help you get a job," interested in his reformation.

The doctor thought of the usual jobs he set with and smiled. "Good night, Miss—, I hope I'll be a changed man when you see me again." He went out, leaving her staring blankly at the door.

Tim in her resolve to give the man a chance to reform without starting handicapped, Marjorie did not tell even Martha of her adventure. When, therefore, Mrs. Sedley, the principal of the preparatory school in which Marjorie taught that fall, called in Dr. Ingram to treat Miss Kershaw's sprained ankle she had no idea that she was furnishing the sequel to the affair.

"Miss Kershaw, I think Dr. Ingram can soon have that foot feeling more comfortable," she said as the doctor followed her into the room.

"I don't seem able to analyze my feelings," the doctor said doubtfully. "To think of a man breaking into a house and stealing—teapots," she said accusingly.

"I seem to have only one," he hazarded excitedly. "I rather think it was at a masquerade," she retorted, her eyes flashing.

"You were kind enough to promise me a job. I see you are a woman of your word." He wrapped the bandage skillfully, taking longer than was customary. "I have made a bad job of this," shyly tearing the linen into a shorter length than he wanted. "Could you find a bandage somewhat longer than this, Mrs. Sedley?" he asked in an absolutely professional manner.

When she left the room the girl looked at him reproachfully. "And they were your rooms," she said shamefacedly.

"I wouldn't have missed so charming an experience for worlds," he said emphatically. "Mrs. Jordan positively refused to commit herself on the subject."

The girl gave an irrepressible giggle. "Please bring them when you come next time," she said, then suddenly grew serious. "Will I be able to skate this winter?" anxiously.

He looked at her with a solemnity befitting the last stage of a hopeless case. "It will need a great deal of attention, but I think—just think, mind you—that you might skate the first time the ice is thick enough—if you had a physician at hand to watch you and keep you from overexertion."

Her face flushed and she heard, with relief, Mrs. Sedley's returning footsteps.

"Promise that you'll go the very first freeze," he said eagerly; "promise—or I vow I'll put on something that will blister—and will put pins in the bandage—lots of 'em."

She hesitated, her eyes shy before the impulsive admiration in his gaze. "I promise," she said softly, as Mrs. Sedley entered the room.

"The very thing, Mrs. Sedley," he exclaimed, taking the roll of linen, "we will have her as comfortable as can be. And Mrs. Sedley, I wish you would see to it that she does not allow that ankle to grow stiff when she recovers the use of it. There will soon be fine skating—I should recommend it as the exercise most suited to the ligaments involved."

"I told you I might be turned into a nice, respectable man," he whispered. "I like my new job—himself!"

STAKED HIS VIOLIN.

The Incident That Cured the Great Paganini of Gambling.

When Nicolo Paganini was only sixteen years of age, it is said, he left his father's house and plunged into a reckless life of dissipation and gambling.

At times his losses at the gaming table even compelled him to part with his violin. This occurred at Leghorn, where he was billed for a concert.

A resident French merchant and amateur M. Livron, hearing of his dilemma, loaned him a Joseph Guarnerius. When Paganini went to return it after the concert the enthusiastic Frenchman exclaimed, "Never shall my hands profane the instrument which yours have touched," and presented the violin to the virtuoso.

This became Paganini's favorite violin and is the one he left to the city of Genoa, where it is exhibited in the municipal palace. The threatened loss of this instrument cured him of gambling.

According to Paganini himself, his means had been reduced at the gaming table to a few francs, and he felt that he would be obliged to accept a standing offer for his much prized Guarnerius, made to him by a prince who greatly coveted it.

As a last desperate chance of saving his precious violin he staked what little money he had left on one play and won. But the risk he had run gave him such a fright that he quit the gaming table for good and all.

THE GAELIC TONGUE.

Peculiarities of the Language of the Highland Scotch.

There are in Gaelic no neuter nouns. They are all either masculine or feminine. Sun, moon, star, tree, rock, stone, etc., are feminine nouns; sky, air, bird, fish, house, farm, etc., are masculine.

A hill is masculine; a mountain, feminine. The ocean is masculine; the sea is feminine. Strange to say, the word for "a female" is a masculine noun and the word for "a manservant" a feminine. But these two curious exceptions stand practically alone.

In the construction of sentences Gaelic is very different from English. People who know enough about the language to make dangerous use of it will tell you, for instance, that in Gaelic you have to talk backward.

By this is meant that you do not begin by using the same word that you would begin with in English. In Gaelic the verb comes before the noun and the noun before the adjective. Thus, if you were going to say "A wise man shuns evil companions" you would arrange your words in this order: "Shuns a man wise companions evil."

This way of putting the verb at the very beginning of a sentence is really better than having it follow the noun. Being the word of the sentence, it stands in its proper place. To the Highlander English is the language that is spoken backward.

Banana Leaves.

Banana leaves serve many useful purposes, for of them are made tough paper from the thinnest tissue to thickest cardboard, clothing, hats and brushes, mats and hammocks. Millions of pounds of banana fiber, misnamed manila "hemp," are each year brought to the United States or taken to Europe and spun into cordage from the fineness of silk up through the size of twine to the bigness of mammoth cables, and many dainty handkerchiefs and bits of fine lace have been woven from the fibers of banana leaves by the deft fingers of the women of South America and of the far east.

The Limerick Variety.

Some years ago M. Paul Villars, London correspondent of the Journal des Debats, went to Limerick on the occasion of a great Nationalist meeting. On arriving at the hotel he asked for a room in the front of the house.

A servant took him to a small dark room looking on to an inner courtyard. M. Villars went to the window and satisfied himself that there was a mistake. "This is not the front of the house," said he.

"Oh, yes, sir," the servant said; "it's the back of the front."

He Probably Spoke.

"I say, Mr. Johnston," said little Tommy, "are you fond of speaking?" "Not very, Tommy," replied Mr. Johnston, with a smile.

"You don't speak much?" "Well, not a great deal."

"I thought so," said little Tommy, "because I heard Sister Agnes say to mamma today that she had been waiting six months for you to speak."

RAILROAD WRECKERS.

More Strenuous Workers Than Fire Fighters in Big Cities.

The career of the wrecker on a big railroad is like that of a fireman in the fire department of a big city, only more strenuous. Like the fireman, the wrecker is on duty every second day and night, and, like the fireman, the wrecker braves blizzards and sleet storms, often facing hardships and cruel suffering and even death for the saving of life and property.

But whereas even in emergency the fireman never covers an area greater than the most populous section of a city—the line traversed by the wrecker covers a hundred or more miles—and whereas the fireman is in touch with at least such comforts as he may snatch while on his feet, not infrequently the wrecker is landed in the heart of a wilderness, miles and miles from the nearest town, and the pangs of hunger are added to privation.

Sometimes when a big wreck has happened and cars and engines are piled high on crushed and mangled bodies the wrecker is rushed through darkness and snowdrift to work from twenty-four to forty-eight hours without even a change to take his cap off, and just as his "job" is nearly completed along comes another alarm that sends him sixty or seventy miles in an opposite direction, where box cars and coal cars have heaped themselves thirty feet high, paralyzing the road and costing thousands of dollars' worth of loss in time and prestige almost every hour.

Despite these hardships, the danger, the excitement and the bustle of the work endear it to the men.—A. W. Rolker in Appleton's.

EASY FOR MORPHY.

Story of the Great Chess Master and a Celebrated Painting.

Paul Morphy, on his visit to Philadelphia, was the guest of a clergyman, the Rev. Mr. H. On his arrival at the minister's home the chess master was first ushered into the library, and his attention was at once attracted by a painting over the mantel, which was a fine copy of a celebrated painting representing a game of chess between a young man and the devil, the stake being the young man's soul.

The artist had most graphically depicted the point in the game where it was apparently the young man's move, and he seemed just to realize the fact that he had lost the game, the agony of despair being shown in every line of his features and attitude, while the devil from the opposite side of the table gloated over him with fiendish delight. The position of the game appeared utterly hopeless for the young man, and Mr. H. said he had often set it up and studied it with his chess friends, and all agreed the young man's game was certainly lost.

Mr. Morphy walked up to the picture and studied it for several minutes, when, turning to Mr. H., he said: "I can win the game for the young man."

Mr. H. was of course astonished and said, "Is it possible?" Mr. Morphy replied, "Get out the men and board and let us look at it."

The position was set up, and in a few rapid moves he demonstrated a complete win for the young man, and the devil was checkmated.

Rice at Weddings.

At a wedding breakfast, according to what a lady told me, a maid was heard to tell the two reasons for rice being used at weddings. It was as believed that if on their wedding journey a newly wedded couple saw a flock of doves it would mean a long life of peace and happiness to them. A bride party in passing so frightened a flock of these timid birds that they flew away in great alarm, and to avert the evil omen that their flight signified for the newly married couple rice was thrown in great quantities to lure the birds back to the place from which they had flown. This plan was so successful that the wedded pair went on their way rejoicing and lived ever afterward a happy and prosperous life. Since then rice has been used as a symbol of good luck, peace and happiness at weddings.

Variations of Cards.

There are an enormous number of possible variations of cards in card games. Every man when he takes up his cards at whist holds one out of 635,012,550,600 possible hands. The total number of variations possible among all players is so great as almost to exceed belief. It has been calculated that if a million men were to be engaged in dealing cards at the rate of one deal every minute day and night for 100,000,000 years they would have exhausted only a hundred-thousandth part of the variations of the cards.

Rome.

Rome is an eternal study. One of the popes asked some strangers whether they had been in Rome for days or weeks or for months.

"If you have been here but a short time," he said, "you may not return, but if you have been here for months you are sure to come back."—Boston Herald.

BIG BALLOON RACES

European Sport For Kentucky
State Fair.

RAILROAD RATES CUT IN TWO

Tickets Go On Sale Sept. 14 and Are Good Returning Until Sept. 23.

Along with the other big amusement enterprises secured for the Kentucky State Fair in Louisville the week of Sept. 16th, the State Board of Agriculture has contracted with aeronauts to put on balloon races. This is a form of sport that has been responsible for the expenditure of thousands of dollars in Europe among the aristocracy during the past few years. It is perhaps the most exciting of all kinds of races.

The balloons to be used at the Kentucky State Fair are as nearly identical as it is possible to manufacture two articles of the same kind. They are to be inflated with the same pressure of gas. Expert operators are to be in charge. Ballasts of sand weighing the same will be given to each, and the result of the races will depend upon the manipulation of this ballast almost entirely.

The balloons will leave the ground at the same time, ascend to a height that will throw them into a current of air, carrying them naturally in the same direction. If, in the mind's eye of the spectator, he could divide the balloon race into heats, the moment of reaching this air current would be called the first heat. It is here that the excitement begins. From one balloon a bag of sand is thrown out, from the other one or two. In this way one operator gets the advantage, and if he is skillful he wins the heat.

Viewed from any standpoint, the balloon races at the Kentucky State Fair must prove as great an attraction as anything that is billed for the big week which begins Sept. 16th.

TROTS, PACES, RUNNING RACES

Kentucky State Fair Will Have a Great Speed Program.

No matter in what direction the taste of the visitor may run so far as speed contests are concerned, the Kentucky State Fair at Louisville Sept. 16 to 21 will gratify his desire. There are to be trotting races, pacing races, running races, automobile races and balloon races. A trotting or pacing race has been arranged for each day as follows:

Sept. 16th, 2:20 pacing; Sept. 17th, 2:25 trotting; Sept. 18th, 2:15 pacing; Sept. 19th, 2:15 trotting; Sept. 20th, Trot and Pace; Sept. 21st, 2:10 trotting.

A six hundred-dollar purse is offered on each of these races. One of these will be known as the Louisville Retail Merchants' Association purse, and another as the Louisville Commercial Club purse, appropriations having been made by both of these organizations.

Running races each day for purses of $200 will be conducted, while on Wednesday, Louisville Day, automobile races, limited to Kentucky owned automobiles, will be run. The last mentioned race will follow a great automobile parade entirely around the track. The dates of the balloon races have not yet been announced.

AN IGORROTE VILLAGE

One of the Big Attractions For Kentucky State Fair Week.

In line with its policy to put on only the greatest attractions that can be secured, the Kentucky State Fair management has closed a contract to have an Igorrote Village at the coming exhibition during the week of Sept. 16th, in Louisville, which will undoubtedly prove a great attraction. This village is now located within the White City at Chicago. Its inhabitants are a horde of barbarians who have come direct from the Philippines.

This exhibition is better in fact than the one at the World's Fair in the Philippine Reservation. All of those natives were returned to the Philippines by order of the United States government and new contracts were signed with Uncle Sam to bring over a new lot of genuine dog-eating Igorrotes. The primitive life of these barbarians will be lived every day at the State Fair, just as it is in Bontoc. Their huts are of native material, coming from the island of Luzon. The tribe includes some of the famous head hunters of the Philippines. There are many rites and ceremonies peculiar to these people and there are constant dances and feasts. The native industries are shown in the village, which will be open to inspection all day and half the night during State Fair week at Louisville.

TRAINED WILD ANIMALS.

Mundy's Trained Wild Animal Arena, the big zoological congress that has been holding forth in the famous White City at Chicago this year, has been engaged for the Kentucky State Fair at Louisville, Sept. 16th to 21st. This is admitted to be one of the most complete trained wild animal organizations in America. There is no better collection, nor are there finer specimens of the Asiatic and African carnivora than are to be seen in this big trained wild animal show. Each and every one of them is thoroughly educated and every one is a competent actor.

The New Judge's Notes.

Chief Justice Falconbridge of Ontario, Mr. Justice Britton and Mr. Justice Riddell, a newly appointed judge, were sitting together as a court in Toronto. According to some legalists who were present, the presentation of argument on behalf of one of the clients was rather prolix and not very much to the point, to put it mildly. Mr. Justice Riddell, who, by the way, was not to the same extent inured against the tediousness of the proceedings as were his colleagues, was observed to pass one of them a slip of paper, on which presumably were written some notes on the case. Immediately the "notes" were read, however, by his colleagues there was a subdued suggestion of mirth apparent on their part. It turned out that the "notes" read after this fashion:

THE "NOTES."
(With apologies to Mr. Rudyard Kipling.)
"Oo is it makes that bloom'n' noise?"
Asked Files-on-Parade.
"It's counsel's open'n' argument,"
The color sergeant said.
"Oo 'as to 'ear the bally stuff?"
Asked Files-on-Parade.
"The chief and his two hired men,"
The color sergeant said.

"For he doesn't know his law, he misrepresents the facts;
His logic is so rotten you can see through all the cracks,
And he's pretty sure to get it where the chicken got the ax.
When the court delivers judgment in the morning."

—Cleveland Leader.

A Boomerang Contract.

The author of "A Temperance Town" and "A Texas Steer" spent much of his time in his country home, but one day he appeared unexpectedly in New York at the Lambs' club. Going straight to the cafe, he made one large, inclusive gesture, which brought every man present about him. "It's on me," said Mr. Hoyt. Then he told his story.

It was before the days of electric and gasoline motors, and he had bought a little steam yacht. He engaged as his engineer one of his Yankee neighbors and offered him liberal wages, with the provision that the engineer should find his own coal. It was a long way to the nearest coal yard, and Mr. Hoyt had all the trouble he was looking for to keep his own furnace fed.

"But where shall I get the coal?" the new engineer asked.
"I don't care," said the foremost of American stage humorists. "Steal it."
So the bargain was struck. All went well until in the early autumn Mr. Hoyt went into his cellar to see how much more coal he would have to purchase for the winter. Of several tons on hand in the spring only two or three stavefuls remained. The theft was speedily traced to the engineer. —Saturday Evening Post.

The Sun and the Telescope.

The popular notion is that the astronomer points his telescope directly at the sun and fires his vision point blank across the chasm of millions of miles. Instead, says a writer in the Ohio Magazine, the errand sun rays are lassoed by a coelestiale great circular mirror driven by clockwork in such a manner that it throws its light into another mirror above, and this in turn sends the long, concentrated beam far into the interior of the telescope house. The two mirrors move in automatic adjustment to each other, so that the solar beams may be shot into the building, no matter in what portion of the sky the sun may be situated. At the farther end of the building the reflected sunbeam strikes a concave mirror which catches the light and, flashing it back toward the opening whence it first entered, focuses it into a perfect image of the sun.

Female Diamonds.

The jeweler held a magnifying glass to a superb white diamond.
"Do you see those little diamonds on the farther edge?" he said. "They are invisible to the naked eye, but the glass shows them quite plainly, doesn't it? Well, they are the proof that this diamond is a female; hence we say that there are male and female diamonds, the males, of course, being those that don't produce these growths."

"Female diamonds are always the finest. In fact, nearly all the diamonds of wide world fame are females." —New York Press.

Society of the Cincinnati.

The Society of the Cincinnati was an order established by the officers of the Revolutionary army in 1783 to perpetuate their friendship and to raise funds for the relief of the widows and orphans of those who had fallen during the war. It was so named because it included patriots headed by Washington, between whom and the old Roman farmer-general, Cincinnatus, there were supposed to be many resemblances.

Present Troubles.

"Ah, pretty lady," said the fortune teller, "you wish to be told about your future husband?"

"Not much," replied Mrs. Gailley. "I've come to learn where my present husband is when he's absent." —Philadelphia Press.

Evolution.

"Father," said little Rollo, "what is evolution?"
"Evolution, my son, is a sort of apology which man has invented for displaying so many of the traits of the lower animals." —Washington Star.

Royal Remedy.

Mistress—Your cold's very bad, Jane. Are you doing anything for it? Jane—Oh, yes, ma'am. The chemist 'ave giv' me some cremonated stincture of Queen Anne. —Punch.

He is sufficiently learned that knows how to do well and has power enough to refrain from evil. —Cicero.

Bad Symptoms.

The woman who has periodical headaches, backache, sees imaginary dark spots or specks floating or dancing before her eyes, has growing distress or heavy full feeling in stomach, faint spells, dragging-down feeling in lower abdominal or pelvic region, easily startled or excited, irregular or painful periods, with or without pelvic catarrh, is suffering from weaknesses and derangements that should have early attention. Not all of above symptoms are likely to be present in any case at one time.

Neglected or badly treated and such cases often run into maladies which demand the surgeon's knife if they do not result fatally.

No medicine extant has such a long and numerous record of cures in such cases as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. No medicine has such a strong professional endorsement of each of its ingredients—worth more than any number of ordinary non-professional testimonials. The very best ingredients known to medical science for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments enter into its composition. No alcohol, harmful, or habit-forming drug is to be found in the list of its ingredients printed on each bottle wrapper and attested under oath.

In any condition of the female system, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription can do only good—never harm. Its whole effect is to strengthen, invigorate and regulate the whole female system and especially the pelvic organs. When these are deranged in function or affected by disease, the stomach and other organs of digestion become sympathetically deranged, the nerves are weakened, and a long list of bad, unpleasant symptoms follow. Too much must not be expected of this "Favorite Prescription." It will not perform miracles; will not cure tumors—no medicine will. It will often prevent them, if taken in time, and thus the operating table and the surgeon's knife may be avoided.

Women suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Doctor Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser (1000 pages) is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound copy. Address as above.

A broad-minded man never loses any sleep because another man's opinions fail to agree with his own.

Man's Precious Rib.

A young lady having asked a surgeon why woman was made from the rib of man in preference to another bone, he gave her the following gallant answer: "She was not taken from the head lest she should rule over him, nor from his feet lest he should trample upon her; but she was taken from his side, that she might be his equal; from under his arm, that he might protect her; from near his heart, that he might cherish and love her." —Houston Chronicle.

The Best Dressed Man.

Of course the best dressed man in the world is the English gentleman. If you enter the royal inclosure at Newmarket or visit the lawn at Goodwood on the day of a classic race; if you attend a fashionable orchid or horse show when some great personage presides, you will hardly see any one dressed otherwise than perfectly. But take the hurrying passengers in the city, on the street cars, trains or buses, go freely among the men in the street, and you will share the conviction I have arrived at—namely, that the American is in general dressed more stylishly and in better fitting and better cut clothes. —C. M. S. in Derrick's Trade Report.

Mme. de Stael's Reply.

Mme. de Stael is responsible for a contribution to the woman suffrage question which may interest those who have done and suffered for the cause.

"I have no taste," said Napoleon III talking to her, "for women who meddle with politics." "You may perhaps be right," replied Mme. de Stael, "but since people have taken the freedom to cut off their heads on account of politics they ought at least to be allowed to understand why." —Westminster Gazette.

The Blue Jay.

There is a belief current among the negroes in the south that the blue jay visits the infernal regions every Friday. This belief varies somewhat in different parts of the south. For instance, in South Carolina it is supposed to be carrying sticks for the devil's fires, while in Mississippi and Louisiana the bird is supposed to report to his satanic majesty the status of his affairs on earth. —New York Tribune.

Just Won It.

Magistrate—You didn't steal this watch? Prisoner—No, sir. Magistrate—Then how did you get it? Prisoner—I won it on a bet. Magistrate—What was the bet? Prisoner—I bet a friend that I could take it away from the man who says I stole it. —Illustrated Bits.

Protecting His Interests.

Mr. Tightwad (in Pullman car)—Could I borrow your whisk broom for a few moments, sir? The Porter—No, sah, yo' couldn't. If dey's gwine to be any 'scrimination 'g'n de negro in dis heah cab, I ain't a-gwine to be no access'ry befo' de fact. —Puck.

Love, a cough, smoke and money cannot long be hid. —French Proverb.

Uncle Remus's Magazine For September.

The casual observer is first attracted to Uncle Remus's Magazine for September by the originality and charm of its cover design. This represents the first of a series of "Southern girls" and is drawn with grace and vigor by E. M. Ashe. It is called "The Richmond Girl" and the face and figure are typical of the unusual and fascinating beauty which characterizes so many Virginia gentlewomen.

The contents of the magazine amply fulfill the interest and anticipation created by the preceding numbers, and every feature is well handled.

In the current issue Joel Chandler Harris assumes at will his various and delightful roles, and as Uncle Remus he sings a new song telling how "Erer Rabbit Raised the Dust," while as "the Farmer" writes eloquently and tenderly of "The Little Children on Snap-Bean Farm" and as "Billy Sanders" he expresses some very original and practical views on "Problems and Remedies" touching with rare wisdom the much discussed Race Question.

Don Marquis, the Associate Editor, is well represented by his usual clever department in which timely topics are discussed, as well as by a scholarly book review which gives "An Oriental View of Christendom," and also by a very entertaining story entitled "The Tribulations of a Rhyme Factory."

Other fiction features are excellent stories by John Fleming Wilson, Reina Melcher, Frank H. Sweet and Norval Richardson, while Mr. Harris serial, "The Bishop, The Boogerman and the Fight of Way" moves on toward a dramatic conclusion.

A special article of literary, historic and artistic merit is one contributed by Louise Closser Hale and illustrated by Walter Hale in which this talented pair describe with pen and pencil a thoroughly delightful tour "Through Italy in the Wake of Lucretia Borgia."

Mrs. Lundy (L. H.) Harris contributes a clever essay on "Becoming a Man," and M. A. Lane writes of Weissmann as the third in his series of "Five Men Who Have Made Epochs."

There is another "Page of Stanton" as well as several bits of exquisite verse, while appropriate illustrations are contributed by G. P. Haynes, Alice Beach Winter, R. H. Palenske, James Preston and Charlotte Harding.

The regular departments devoted to literary criticism, theatrical gossip and current New York topics are all replete with genuine interest and unite to form a composite collection of reading matter which should appeal to all sorts and conditions of men.

Champagne Dangerous.

Somebody has discovered that the use of champagne affects the eye. There is no question but that it affects the tongue and the head and sometimes the feet, says the Georgetown Times. No doubt about it, Brother Bell, for we know a fellow that it paralyzed—not a portion of him, but the entire body. He didn't recover for several days.

Purifying Politics.

Judge Vandeventer, of Colorado, declares that the women voters of that State dispose of their suffrage privileges at $15 per privilege on election days. And yet it is a common argument in some quarters that politics would be purified through woman suffrage.

Financial Matters.

There are now in the New York savings banks $963,631,500.

American capital to the extent of $255,000,000 has been invested in Canada during the past few years, induced thereby by the Canadian British preference policy.

The United States is coining annually about $300,000,000 in gold, Great Britain, nearly $60,000,000; Australia a little more than Great Britain; France, about $35,000,000; Germany, about $25,000,000, and Japan more than $30,000,000.

Thomas W. Lawson will feel much better when he sees the Standard Oil crowd getting that $23,240,000 out of the "system."

Everyday Dangers.

In the midst of life we are in death. Everywhere are evidences of the dangers which surround us. No sooner do the echoes of the destruction of the ship on the coast of California, carrying many souls to the bottom, die away than news of a harrowing disaster in our own beloved State comes to us. These are the details as told in one of our Kentucky exchanges:

"Barnett Simpson is suffering from a light wound received accidentally by a stroke of the right hand, which fell unexpectantly and heavily against his right side, while in the act of tying a sack of corn. Pulling hard to secure a knot, the string broke and the work was done."

The foregoing is but one of the many things that can happen to a man, though it is admitted that there is nothing worse than having a hand fall "unexpectantly and heavily," particularly if it falls in the right place. As a further example, however, of everyday horrors, a Virginia paper, tells how "Bud Jackson is suffering from a very sore neck. He hit his neck with a stick and broke it."

When a man tells you that he prefers his old pipe to a good cigar there is no reason why you should believe him.

Now Serving Time.

"Lord" Frederick Seymour Barrington, convicted slayer of James P. McCann, the Kentucky turfman, was removed from the Clayton, St. Louis county, Mo., jail Wednesday to the State prison at Jefferson to serve a life sentence. The sheriff delayed the departure of his prisoner two days as Barrington had a number of things to attend to before leaving the county. He had considerable property which he wished to sell.

A successful financier is a man who can separate other men from their money without the aid of a sandbag.

No Change in Policy.

President Roosevelt in an address delivered Tuesday at Provincetown, Mass., declared there would be no change in the policy of the Administration and that every effort would be made to punish violations of the law. The laying of the corner stone of the Cape Cod Pilgrim memorial monument in the presence of the President Gov. Guild and distinguished guests, completed the foundation of one of the most imposing structures along the Atlantic coast, commemorating the first landing within a few feet of its base of the Pilgrim Fathers.

With the exception of the undertaker few men finish all they undertake.

It takes a man to explain to a woman things that he doesn't understand himself.

Get Together.

It has been said that every little country village has an ambition to become a trade center and a boom city, with no special natural features or geographical advantages. Under such conditions what is most needed is some enterprise on the part of local capital. They must make the first advance in the uncertain field of development. They must capitalize small factories and see that they are kept employed. When the local business is finally developed and proves to the world that they are successful, then outside enterprises will be sure to step in and enjoy your prosperity with you. Just like a fellow who finds a favorite fishing hole and catches fish, and all the other fishermen who see that he is catching will drop their hooks right by the side of the lucky fisherman. The business men of any town should stop talking and hoping for others to do something for the town. They should get together themselves and prove to the world that they have a money making town. No outsider will want to fish in our swimming hole until we prove that we can catch fish.

Many a man does nothing but hope from morning till night, then sits down and calls it a day's work.
